Welcome to the universe of colleges, universities, Bible colleges/schools and a seminary with heritage rooted deeply in Christian faith and in the history and ministry of Baptists.

Within these pages you will find significant information about each of the schools in the International Association of Baptist Colleges and Universities (IABCU) family that choose to work together to provide education of the highest academic quality. Each school emphasizes spiritual growth and provides tremendous opportunities to serve God by seeking to meet human needs.

As you learn more about these schools you will want to make plans to visit campuses and talk with the people there. Each school has its own personality and set of emphases. One common thread is that the faculty and staff of each school genuinely care about you and want to work with you in choosing the school that best meets your needs.

Each school provides financial assistance for students based on a variety of criteria. There is likely more financial aid available than you are aware. That’s why it is important to read all you can and visit the schools via our Website at <www.baptistschools.org> or <www.baptistcolleges.org>. Use the web links to the schools found on our Website to learn more about each institution. As you make personal visits to select campuses, be sure you take time to talk with admissions and financial aid people. They want to hear from you and will count it a privilege to work with you.

Choosing the school where you will invest time and effort during a crucial period of your life is one of the most important decisions you will make. Please consider our schools before making your final decision.

For other friends who simply are interested in learning more about the schools that are part of the IABCU family, we welcome you to explore, probe and ask questions of us directly. As you learn more about our schools you will be pleased with what you find.

Baptist University of the Americas (BUA) is a baccalaureate degree-granting theological university with a cross-cultural focus. In 2010, BUA celebrated 62 years of service as one of nine Texas Baptist universities affiliated with the Baptist General Convention of Texas. From its earliest days as the Mexican Baptist Bible Institute to its current incarnation, BUA has taken as its mission the formation, from the Hispanic context, of cross-cultural Christian leaders. Today, while the majority of the student body is Hispanic there also are African American and Anglo students as well as students from more than 20 foreign countries.

As the only federally recognized Hispanic Serving Institution (HSI) among Baptists, BUA is designed to deliver higher education to Christian students who desire a learning environment that affirms Hispanic and other ethnic cultures and is affordable, accessible and missional. BUA prepares students for serving God and neighbor in the emerging world marked by multi-culturalism, globalization, and ever-changing ministry and missionary models and provides an intimate and nurturing learning community.

Established by Baptists of East Tennessee in 1851, Carson-Newman offers an educational experience built on the twin pillars of academic rigor and Christian excellence. The academic program seeks to teach students to think, write, read well, and to present and enter into the give and take of argument so as to become educated citizens and worldwide servant leaders. C-N professors employ their gifts and talents daily to help prepare students who in turn serve God by serving his creation. Perennially cited by U.S. News & World Report, The Princeton Review and Forbes.com, C-N was ranked 13th by Newsweek/Kaplan among “service-minded schools.” Beyond the classroom, faculty and staff members engage students in service projects, missions opportunities and study trips around the globe.

Choose a Baptist School and Get an Education for Life

Choosing the Baptist-related educational institution that best fits your needs can be a challenging but rewarding decision because you may choose from 52 quality institutions. Consider attending one of the 49 colleges and universities, two Bible colleges or one seminary.

Each of these quality institutions specializes in “educating for life.” Educating for life means equipping students for a successful and rewarding career and for other challenges and opportunities found in family life, church ministries, community service, and world citizenship.

Encourage prospective students to choose a school where they can begin educating for life!

Financial Aid Tips

1 Start early. Contact the financial aid office as soon as you have decided on a college and ask for all forms and information about grants, loans, jobs and institutional scholarships. It is not too early to begin your college inquiry during the junior year in high school. Go to www.baptistschools.org for a listing of schools and special help for prospective students and parents.

2 File a need analysis form. There are many versions of this form and you should check with the school you are interested in attending to see what is required. The need analysis form is important because it determines the family contribution expected for students.

3 Investigate sources. Be sure to check with your high school guidance counselor, your state Baptist convention, local Baptist association, pastor, local civic clubs and other organizations about financial aid programs they might be aware of or offer.

4 Ask about special institutional programs. Many Baptist colleges offer special aid programs to children of Baptist ministers and to students preparing for church-related vocations. In addition, some Baptist colleges offer special scholarships to children of alumni.

5 Check federally-sponsored programs. These programs include Pell Grants, Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, College Work-Study, National Direct Student Loans, Guaranteed Student Loans and others.
Does it really make a difference where you choose to go to college? What should you look for when you are selecting a school?

Look for a college where the institutional mission statement talks about a “Christian” or “Christ-centered” emphasis. That statement will be found in the catalog and student handbook and the school must demonstrate to accrediting agencies that it takes specific and appropriate action to carry out its mission. When you talk with admissions counselors or other representatives of the college, ask about the steps that are taken to make the educational experience one that is truly Christ-centered.

Look for a college where quality classroom instruction is given a high priority. That concept usually expresses itself with relatively small classes taught by fully prepared professors. Large classes taught by graduate assistants generally end up being impersonal and contribute significantly to high drop-out rates. What you experience in the classroom may well be the most important part of the college experience. The kind of faculty hired and the priority given to teaching will shape what happens in the classroom.

Look for a college where the institution emphasizes high standards of morality, ethics and decency. We live in an “anything goes” society and all too often the atmosphere in colleges and universities are more mirrors of contemporary society than they are mirrors of good values. Check out the student handbook and look at the policies that regulate campus atmosphere and living conditions.

When the school stands for Christian principles of conduct, the campus atmosphere and institutional focus will offer a climate where a person can flourish. A college or university which unashamedly attempts to incorporate the highest and best of Christian thinking and behavior into its institutional life will do more to educate the whole student than one where “anything goes”.

Look for a college or university where there is evidence that people will really care about students and their well-being. It’s important that you feel that you matter to the administrators and to the faculty and that they are available to answer your questions or assist you when you need help. The years you spend getting your education are too important for you. Students can find a new sense of direction when a caring Christian professor takes the time to help them with a problem or when a caring Christian administrator invests some time with a student.

The atmosphere on campus has a great deal to do with whether a student stays in school and perseveres to get his or her degree within the traditional four or five years. An intentionally, unapologetically Christian college is marked by an atmosphere where the students feel that they really are valued as persons.

One of the factors that distinguishes a Christian college from a secular institution is the attention given to and the value placed on spiritual growth and development at the same time it emphasizes academic excellence.

Every human being needs to grow and develop intellectually, socially, professionally, emotionally, and spiritually.

In the Christian college there are no restrictions to prevent professors and the institutional climate from lifting the students’ sights to look for the highest standard in every area of development. Colleges and universities that emphasize spiritual growth and development alongside intellectual and professional growth and development will be places where a student stands the best chance of becoming all God wants him or her to be.

Most colleges and universities are comfortable with the task of imparting information with the hope that the student will absorb some of it and grow intellectually. Everyone expects also that during the college experience a student will decide on a major and begin preparing for the world of work and thus they will emphasize professional or pre-professional development.

The variety of campus activities and services help to address a student’s psychological and social needs with the expectation that the student is going to mature some in his or her social skills.

The area of development most often neglected is the area of spiritual growth. Wouldn’t it be tragic to invest four or five critical years of your life developing the foundations to become intellectual and professional and end up being morally and spiritually deficient because that part of your education was neglected?

Faculty and staff serve as mentors and encouragers to students and often help students work through their search for growing in their walk with God. Frequently God uses those faculty mentors or staff encouragers to help a student come to a deeper understanding of God’s will for his or her life vocationally.

Where you choose to go to college may well be one of the most important decisions you will ever make.

A student’s chances of succeeding are greatly enhanced by choosing a school where the characteristics noted here are found.

Take your search seriously. Ask the tough questions. Talk to current students as well as to the professional counselors working with you. Your future will be profoundly affected by the college you choose.
